W. T. STEAD.

The Courageone Editor who has Made Shocking Disclosures of London Life.

We give an authentic and recent likness of W. T. Stead, editor of the Indl. Mall Guzette, London, who has let all the world know how eminently deprayed are some men who fleure in the tative men in England. One tesuit of the disclosures made is the probability that l'arliament will legislate in the direction of offering greater protection to isverty and innocence against the hideons spollation wrought by wealth and power allied to gross sensuality.

Mr. Stead was born at Howden, in the county of Northumberland.ln 1850. He was educated chiefly at home by his father, who was a Congregational minister of innuble means; but at twelve years of age was sent from home to school. After remaining there two years, he began to earn his livelihood. His first employment was in the Russ shin Consulate at Newcastle-on-Tyne. Discovering an extraordinary aptitude and love for journalistic work. he next found employment on a newspaper, and when only twenty-one years old, was given the position of editor of a daily Radical journal published at Darlington, Durham, a town situated about forty miles south of Newcastle. From this position he was called to be assist tant editor of the Pull Mall Gazette, under John Morley, the celebrated writer and editor. When Mr. Morley resigned his position, Mr. Stead was promoted to it. His jucumbency of the chair of one of the most in linencial papers in Europe has been chiefly remarkable for his consistent championship of Itussia in the Afghan dispute; and, more particularly, for the shocking discoveries he has made of wickedness in high places.

"thant's Memorial: what shall it be." is discussed in the September number of the North American Review, by Lauut Thompson, Karl Gerhardt, O. L. Warner, and Wilson McDonald, sculptors; W. H. Beard, painter; Caivert Vaux and Henry Van Brunt, architects; and Clarence Cook, art critic. This symposium is sure to attract while attention at this time, when the desire is so general to erect a mounment to consideration of the question, "Shail our National Banking System be Abolshed?" by George S. Boutwell, F. J. Scott, S. Dana Horton and Edward H. G. Clark. "Onlda" contributes nu essay on "The Teudencies of English Fiction," and Elizabeth Stuart Phelps writes on "The Great Psychical Opportunity." But the most readable article in the number is ex. Sergeant-at-Arms French's "Reminiscenses of Famous Americans,11 whileh is a series of delightful anecdotes about the famous war senators. Mr. Freuch is writing n book of these reminiscenses. If it equals this forestallment in the Review, it will be one of the famous works of modern literature.

"What's the Matter With You?" "Well, not much in particular. But kind of good sense. I'm a little aling all over. I don't sleep well, and my kldneys are out of order, and I cau't enjoy my meals, and I've a touch of rheumatism, and once in a while a twinge of neuralgia.11 Now,

When the war began our most trusted military man was Gen. Scott, the hero of two wars, and im as the leader of the leaders. But new and exceptional duties devolved upon him. War was essentially a progressive science, and the fame of the great captain of the age was dimmed. by the historic disaster at Manassas. Then came the prond, the gallant, the accomplished McClellan, the finest military tactician of his time, the young Napoleon, possessing the entire confidence of the whole North, without regard to parties or party lines, but he was wrecked in bitter partisan strife notwithstanding the splendld discipline of the "grandest army on the planet" and the heroic and immortal field of Anticiam. Following close upon the gallant McClellan came Halleck, the great anthority upon the art of war and the law of nations, esteemed one of the ablest soldiers of the age, but his star favorable.
